Of the numerous Shanghai shipowners who relocated to Hong Kong and Taiwan after 1949, Teh Hu Steamship Co. has been one of the less conspicuous but it has endured and ultimately prospered over 73 years. It has managed to straddle the awkward divides between Hong Kong, China and Taiwan and today owns a small fleet of modern 'Capesize' bulk carriers, a far cry from the little old trampships with which it began. The company can be seen to have developed in four phases: 1) the opportunistic phase of small secondhand ships for local trading; 2) from 1962 the acquisition of 10,000-dwt war-built ships for regional trading; 3) from 1969 the acquisition of new-built bulk carriers; 4) from 1985 the deployment of new Capesize bulk carriers in worldwide trading.

Teh Hu Steamship Company Limited was formed in Shanghai on 6 June 1948. According to Stephanie Zarach's history of the Hong Kong Shipowners' Association, it was a syndicate of the Wu, Liu and Lo families. Its first ship, aptly named Teh Hu, was the 1,028-ton ex British cargo-passenger coaster Sanda (1911). Based on interview with Kenneth Lo, Zarach states that Teh Hu operated ships in the Yangtse and coastal trades. Any other ships must have been chartered because there is no other record of ownership. York Lo's recent web article on the company states that founder T.Y. Wu (武進) (1903-79) came from the prosperous city of Soochow in Kiangsu province and had been a chemistry graduate of the Soochow Industrial School. With reference to a biography of his later business partner James Chao (Foremost Shipping), Lo adds that Wu had worked for Standard Oil before establishing Teh Hu Co. (德和公司) in Shanghai to deal in the import-export of machinery, metals and miscellaneous goods. After Shanghai was occupied by the Japanese in mid-1937, Wu moved to Kunming in Yunnan province, where he established the Teh Hu machinery factory 'in the winter of 1939'. The background of the other two families is unknown. The characters 德 (Teh) and 和 (Hu/Wo) translate as 'Virtue' and 'Harmony'.

Before Shanghai was taken over by Mao's Communist forces in May 1949, most if not all the principals relocated to Taipeh. Teh Hu was probably requisitioned by the retreating Nationalist forces and after the fall of Canton/Guangzhou in mid-October 1949 ended up in Hong Kong. The Straits Times (19/12/49) reported from Hong Kong that 54 of the 72-man crew had kept a vigil outside the flat of the company's manager demanding back pay of $20,000 and repatriation to Shanghai. The ship was re-registered in Keelung and traded out of Taiwan and Hong Kong, being reported in October 1952 as far south as Singapore. Lo mentions that Wu made various non-maritime investments in Taiwan, most notably in 1957 with S.S. Chu in potassium sulfate producer South East Soda Manufacturing (Sesoda), of which he became Chairman

Founder Wu T.Y. (1903-79) in 1971
(National Repository of Cultural Heritage at York Lo, 2018).

In July 1956 Teh Hu was reconstituted in Taipei with a capital of 900,000 (New Taiwanese) yuan. Hitherto it had remained a single-ship company but, coinciding its reconstitution, it began to expand the fleet by purchase in Australasia of two freighters, the 3250-dwt Amazona and the 4,800-dwt Amelia. The former had been the nickel carrier Cap Tarifa, the latter a general cargo vessel Kairanga. Amelia was registered to a new Panamanian subsidiary, Compania de Navegacion Victoria Neptuno. In reporting the sale and renaming of the 'veteran steamer', the 'Wellington Dominion' of mid-May 1956 stated that a Chinese crew was expected in Auckland by air from Hong Kong on May 25 and that, after delivering a cargo of scrap in Japan, the ship would be employed in the owner's freight service between Hong Kong, Taiwan and Korea.

In mid-October 1957 Teh Hu Steamship Co. Ltd was registered in Hong Kong as a foreign entity with its place of business at 27 Connaught Road (1st floor). The two authorized representatives were Managing Director Wu Tchung Year (as above) and Manager Liu Chiung Kia (劉仲嘉, b.1912). As of 16 September 1957, the other directors, all resident in Taipeh, were listed as Lee Loo Shan (Lok Lee San), Lu Che Kong (Lo Chi Kung) and (Mrs Wu) Shen Su Ying, wife of T.Y. Yu.

The rate of Teh Hu's expansion was very much determined by the availability of mortgage finance. Until the mid-1950s, foreign banks, most notably the Hongkong and Shanghai Bank, had been unwilling to lend to Chinese shipowners. Instead, the mechanism had been for prominent shipbrokers such as Wallems and Wheelock Marden to act as registered owners and financial guarantors while the beneficial Chinese owners operated the ships until the loans were paid off. In 1956, however, as Robin Hutcheon recounts in 'First Sea Lord' (1990), Y.K. Pao secured mortgage finance on his own behalf from the Hongkong & Shanghai Bank for a secondhand ship against the security of a Japanese charter. That opened the door for other shipowners. In the case of Teh Hu few details are available but it seems to have used multiple channels. In May 1959 Amos ex Talune was financed by the Chartered Bank through Hornbeam Co. Ltd, while in June 1961 Amonea ex Trierstein was financed by mortgage from the Bank of America in Hong Kong.

Although Hong Kong had long been the focus of the Teh Hu's operations, Teh Hu Steamship Co. (Hong Kong) Ltd was not registered as a local entity until 18 December 1964 (#10,922). Capital was $3 million in 30,000 shares of $100 each and fully paid up. T.Y. Wu with 11,350 shares was the largest single shareholders and with his wife Suying and sons Chung Wah (New York) and Chung Dan, research and electronic engineers respectively, along with Mrs Wu Lok Mo Lan (Hong Kong) and Mr Wu Pai Foo (Taipeh) controlled a total block of 77.5%. Most of the balance of holdings were made up by the other two founders, Liu Chung Kia and daughter Miss (Amelia) Yung Liu (together 2,900 shares) and Lo Chi Kong with Lo Keung Wah and Lok Lee San (together 2,900), the last three all resident in Taipeh. Mr Niu Nai Seng of the Tamachi Building in Tokyo held 500 shares and presumably looked after the important Japanese side of the business. There were no fewer than seven directors: T.Y. Wu, his wife, two sons and daughter plus C.K. Liu and C.K. Lo.

Whereas in the 1950s and into the early 1960s Teh Hu had mostly deployed old secondhand ships of not more than around 6,000-dwt tons in regional trading, from 1960 there was a determination to acquire larger trampships in the standard 10,000-dwt category that were more attractive to Japanese charterers. Such ships were becoming available at reasonable prices, mainly in the form of war-built tonnage that was being superseded in British and European tramp fleets. Teh Hu's did not move as aggressively as Wah Kwong and some other Hong Kong owners but its acquisitions included successively Babylon (1945), Bethlehem (1939), the 'Liberty' Justice (1944), Boaz (1943), Bucentaur (1939) and Amelia (1946). Along with the 13,410-dwt converted tanker Billy (1929), the others made up an ill-assorted fleet but they gave Teh Hu entrée to and experience of the booming Japanese steel industry market for coal, ore and scrap cargoes from as far away as India and Australia.

Bulk carrier conversion BILLY at Sydney, November 1965 (David Nance/NAA).

In the mid-1960s Teh Hu also purchased two British cargoliners BI's Umaria, which became Amonea (IV) and Canadian Pacific's big and fast Beaverglen, which became Ping An. Both were lost almost immediately, the former to typhoon 'Rose' in Hong Kong, the latter to engine trouble, probably because of unfamiliarity with the turbine-electric machinery, and an ill-timed storm in the North Sea. Amonea (II) had previously been lost to stranding in the South China Sea in December 1960, while Bethlehem would be sunk in collision near Singapore in August 1969 and Cynthlema become a CTL after a bunkering explosion and fire at Hong Kong in September 1973. After this horror run of five losses, Teh Hu suffered no further total losses.

York Lo records that in 1964 Wu became one of five shareholders in the syndicate Foremost Maritime set up in New York by a young master mariner James S.C. Chao (b. 1927), who personally held 20% and served as Manager. Chao purchased new ships from Taiwan and gained contracts from the U.S. Department of Agriculture to ship agricultural products to Vietnam. By 1971 Foremost deployed 8 bulk carriers but in the next year after 'setbacks' Wu and partners sold out to Chao for a nominal amount.

In 1969 Teh Hu began to move into its third phase with delivery by Taiwan Shipbuilding of its first new-built bulk carrier, the 28,600-dwt Righteous, followed in 1972 by the near sister Virtuous. The following year the 15,000-dwt 'Freedom'-type Bounteous and the slightly larger 17,500-dwt Graceous were delivered by Japanese yards. Reflecting this shift towards premium tonnage, there was also a change of nomenclature. Hitherto, with the obvious exceptions of 'Teh Hu' and 'Ping An', ships had usually carried the Christian names of family members such as the oft-repeated 'Amelia', after T.Y.'s daughter, and subsequently 'Suying' after his wife, also 'Amos' and later 'Billy'. 'Amonea', however, is highly unusual and unexplained. The 10,000-dwt ships tended to carry 'B' names, some like 'Babylon', 'Bethlehem' and 'Boaz' with biblical connotations, reflecting T.Y.'s Christian piety, though Bucentaur was named after the golden barge of the Doge of Venice. From Righteous onwards, both new and secondhand bulk carriers carried the names of virtues or other auspicious characteristics with suffix 'ous'. It was probably at this time that the plain black funnel gave way to the white 'TH' monogram in a white circle on a wide red band.

On January 1974 Teh Hu merged with the small firm Cargocean Shipping Co. Ltd (海運航業) to form Teh-Hu Cargocean Management Company Limited (德和海運管理), henceforth TCM. Registered in Hong Kong in March 1968, Cargocean, which had only two 6-6,600-dwt timber carriers, the Japanese-built Hsin Mei and Hsin Pioneer, was controlled, according to Yok Lo, by the Yeh family, whose main business was the Hsin Chong Construction Group. Like T.Y. Wu, Yeh Kan-Nee (Godfrey) had been established in Shanghai before relocating to Hong Kong and re-establishing Hsin Chong & Co. there in 1939. There may have been a marriage tie between the two families. Of TCM's $550,000 paid-up capital in 55,000 shares of $10, Hsin Chong Enterprises (Bahamas) Ltd held 16,496 and Godfrey, Geoffrey and Darius Yeh one share each (in total 30%); T.Y. Wu held 10,000, C.K. Liu and Kenneth Keung Wah Lo both 8,375, and the balance was held by Superintendent Engineer Yuan Chuan Lin (1,500), Shipping Manager Tai Men Kwok (1,500) and two accountants 1,000 each. As the name implied, TCM was not a shipowning but a ship management company that took over the pre-existing Hong Kong and flag-of-convenience operations but Teh Hu Steamship Co. (HK) Ltd remained a live company in Hong Kong while the original Teh Hu Steamship Co. retained a separate identity in Taiwan. C.K. Liu became Managing Director and Kenneth Lo, who had moved to Hong Kong in 1951, became his Deputy. By 1985 the fleet managed by Teh-Hu Cargocean had grown to 900,000 tons and in 1986-87 served a term as Chairman of the Hong Kong Shipowners' Association (founded 1957).

The next thirty-five years are a story of rapid escalation in vessel size. The first newbuilds, Righteous (1969) and Virtuous (1972) were 28,610 and 28,765 dwt respectively. In the mid-1970s there followed the British built SD-14 Righteous (1976) and four 'Freedom'-type from Japanese yards (Duteous, Spacious, Harmonious and Victorious), all geared bulk carriers of less than 20,000 dwt, plus the converted Maersk tankers Ambitious, Courteous and Glorious in the 25-26,000 dwt range. The 1980s began with delivery of the Panamax-size Precious (1981), Beauteous (1982) and Gorgeous (1982) in the 54,500-58,400 range along with the secondhand, Swedish-built Mighteous (1972) of 104,800 dwt. Then in 1985 Sumitomo delivered the TCM's first Capesize, the 145,000 Diamond Glorious. The 150,000-tonners Marvellous (1989), Prosperous (1990), Aberous (1992) and Courageous (1995) followed from China Shipbuilding Corporation in Kaohsiung and, after a brief pause, the 170,000-tonners Ingenious (1999), Graceous (1999) and Marvellous (II) (2000) from Korean yards. After further pause, the 175,000-dwt Harmonious (II) (2007) was the first to be delivered by a Chinese yard, followed in 2011 by the 180,000-dwt Prosperous (II), in 2014 by the 206,000-dwt Harmonious (III), and in 2019 by the 181,000-dwt Fabulous. Korean yards delivered the 180,000-tonners Marvellous (III) (2011) and Graceous (III) (2017), so that the fleet now consists entirely of Capesize bulk carriers. The closer engagement with China was notable for a company that retains links with Taiwan and allowed TCM to be part of the Chinese boom, specifically in regard to expansion of China's steel industry. At the same time, TCM remained diversified with well-established networks in Japan and Korea as well as Hong Kong and Taiwan.

TCM has been fortunate to be able to maintain continuity in management. After the death in December 2004 at age 92 of long-serving Managing Director C.K. Liu, who had succeeded T.Y. Wu after his death in 1979 at age 76, the former's long-serving Deputy Kenneth Lo, who in practice had been managing the business since its formation in 1974, took over as Managing Director and remains in charge. In the timing of order and sales TCM seems to have adhered to the shrewd business philosophy of Aristotle Onassis: build cheaply when the market is depressed, hold off when it is buoyant, and sell any ship if the price makes it worthwhile. Lo's refinement was to build wherever would best suit the long-term shipment contract that would finance construction, thus variously in Japan, Taiwan, Korea and China. TCM itself is an unassuming operation. Since the mid-1980s, it has been content to maintain a modern fleet of around 1 million tonnes (deadweight), to ride the market, and to maintain its business networks and reputation. Since 2000 most of its ships have been managed by Anglo-Eastern Ship Management Ltd of Hong Kong. This allows TCM's own Hong Kong office to be a small one of around a dozen people keeping an eye on global markets.

An interview with Kenneth Lo in 'The Japan Times' (1 July 2012) gave good insight into his conservative and patient business philosophy: 'I do not wish for our company to be very big... in the shipping industry, you do not always need a large fleet to get large profits. We have a very simple yet specialized company. Through our way of managing our business, it has given us years of success in this volatile industry.' He explained his formula for success as twofold: 'First, we must continue to study and improve ourselves. By studying the market and specializing in our services, we have become more flexible and capable of tackling new challenges. Secondly, we have been very humble. Humility for me is very important, and I share this insight with my younger executives as well.'

TCM Managing Director, Kenneth Lo (TCM in 'The Japan Times', 1 July 2012)
