Foreign flag beneficial ownerships are not listed separately.
(Instead, find the beneficial ownership entries under the Chinese ownerships.)

Note: A shipowners' Association was formed in 1927. NCH 9/7/27 reported Chinese shipping companies had formed an Association with Yu Ya-Ching (former Chairman of Chinese Chamber of Commerce) as President and a Committee of 15 consisting of representatives from China Merchants, San Peh, Ningshao, Hoong On, Shao Shing (?Shawhsing), Ta(h) Shing, Ching Kee, An Tai, Ping An, Foo Shing, Ning Shing (sic.) and Wen Kee. (Companies in bold are included below, others on site at oldchinaships.com).

NOTE: The little Yangtse and Near Coast routes were the origins of a number of firms which grew to become major Chinese shipping concerns, and we have therefore dealt with them elsewhere rather than in this list:

The Ningpo Shaoshing (Ningshao) S.N. Co. Ltd (1909)
Hoong On Steam Navigation Co. Ltd (HOSNC) (1918)
Ningshin Steamship Co. Ltd (NSSC) (1918) are dealt with in the list of Yu Ya-ching (Yu Xiaqing) shipping group to be found on the "Big 5" page of oldchinaships.com.

From interviews with George Cheng, Stephanie Zarach, Changing Places (2007) identifies Cheng Leung Yung [Chung Liang Yu] (grandfather of George and Peter Cheng) as establishing Lao Gong Mao [Laou Kung Mow] shipyard and drydock in 1890, then Ping An Steamship Co. in 1905. More details emerge rather haphazardly from reports in the North China Herald. In 1895 Chung Liang-Yue (sic.) was a founding Director of the Laou Kung Mow Cotton Spinning & Weaving Co. Ltd. By the end of 1896 all the buildings had been completed and the engine, boilers and machinery were being fitted. General Managers were Ilbert & Co. of 22 Kiangse Road. Ilbert & Co. had been established in 1875 by Arthur Ilbert as merchant house before diversifying into textile manufacturing (Laou Kung Mow) and insurance (Sun Life Ins. Co. and Commercial Union Fire Ins. Co.), also sugar and rubber in the Malay States. By 1908 Wright & Cartwright list the retired partners as A. Ilbert, S. Walker, J. Beattie and Sir Charles Dudgeon, current partners being F. Anderson, E.C. Pearce and H.E. Campbell.

On 1 April 1907 Chung Liang Yu of Toong Yue Hong was identified as Provisional Director with E.C. Pearce (Ilbert & Co.) and two other Europeans of The Shanghai-Paoshan Land Co. Ltd with a capital of Tls 1million to develop a 12-acre site on the northern side of the international Settlement. It is therefore likely that Chung Liang Yu was the Chinese business manager ('compradore') of Ilbert & Co. while Toong Yue Hong was his own firm. CLY was re-elected continuously to the Board of Laou Kung Mow, which in November 1913 opened an extension with another 6,720 spindles (NCH 21/2/14).

First evidence of Cheng as a shipowner is the secondhand purchase in August 1907 of the small river steamer Paohua for trading Shanghai-Ningpo. She was recorded as sold to Ilbert & Co. but it may be inferred that the beneficial owner was Chung/Cheng himself, who in 1909 became the registered owner through Toong Yue Hong. On 15 September 1908 the steamer Ping An (170' x 27') was launched by the Tung Yue Hong shipyard at Tungkadoo for Mr Chun(g) Liang-yue of Tung Yue Hong for the Shanghai-Chusan Islands trade. She had been built by Chinese workmen under his own superintendence and fitted with engines and boilers built from imported materials. Apparently she was the first Chinese steamer to be constructed in Shanghai without foreign superintendence. Mr Brodie Clarke (Dunn, Hopkins & Co.) gave the toast (NCH, 19/9/08).

In 1909 there followed purchase of ex China Navigation Coy's Chingtu and Tsinan, two of a clipper-bowed quartette built for the Japan-China-Australia trade. They were purchased for Ping An through Wallem & Co. and then transferred to the Norwegian flag in the name of Jacob Christensen of Bergen, evidently as a nominee, to allow them to trade regionally, primarily as colliers from Japan to Shanghai, often with Thoresen & Co. as agent.

In 1913 Toong Yue, Shipowner became a subscriber to Lloyd's Register. The fleet continued to increase through local newbuilds and some secondhand purchases. According to Zarach, during the shipping boom of World War I (1914-18) Ping An acquired two ships of 5,000 and 8,000 tons but these vessels are not able to be identified. Registered ownership is not easy to trace. Thus in LR 1918/9 there are listings under Tung Yue [company] and Chun Liang Yue [person] but by LR 1926/7 the prime listing was Toong Yue, Liang Kee & Co., which by 1929/30 had become Tung Yue S.S. Co. under Chun Si Dong [Cheng Sih Tong/Tung/Toong], son of Chung Liang Yu (Cheng Leung Yung). Other ships were registered under Kung Mow, Yih Tah or Yue Loong S.S. Coys but in all cases the operating company seems to have been Ping An S.S. By the 1930s China Yearbooks list Ping An as serving the Chekiang ports of Shachuan, Pinghu and Taichow, also Ningpo and Wenchow.

After Chun Si Dong (uncle of George and Peter, see below) was killed in 1932 by protection racketeers, his wife Cheng Suen Man Shook (now with 4 children) took over and carried forward the business. Zarach records that in August 1937 after the outbreak of the Sino-Japanese War, four Ping An ships were scuttled by order of the Republican Government. However, in late 1937 or early 1938 Paohua, Ping Yang, Hsin Pao Hua and Tah Wah were transferred to the registered ownership of the China American S.S. Co. Inc. of Shanghai under the Portuguese flag to become Don Joao, Don Pedro, Don Luis and Don Jose respectively. Advertised as the Don Line, they continued to trade as usual under the agency of Messrs H. Barrion and G. Duclos. On 1 June 1938 these two gentlemen advised 'that they reserve the rights granted to them by contract for the operation of the [four] Don Line steamers...and inform all consular authorities and private concerns that they will object to any transfer, sale, charter or operation of these steamers as long as all outstanding accounts have not been settled' (NCH, 1/6/38). What transpired was not reported but by September 1938 China American S.S. Co. had become the agents. In mid-April 1939 three of the ships were seized at sea by Japanese naval ships on grounds of 'illegal transfer' from the Chinese flag, placed under the Japanese flag and detained at Woosung. Their fate is unknown except for Tah Wah/Don Jose, which was recovered at the end of the Sino-Japanese War. Zarach notes that Mrs Cheng remained in Shanghai through to 1945.

Postwar the small ex-Scandinavian steamer Ping An was acquired in 1947 from other Chinese owners in Shanghai as a consort to Tah Wah but peacetime trading was shortlived. In mid-1949 the Republican regime collapsed on the mainland. Tah Hwa was requisitioned for the evacuation to Taiwan but apparently was not reregistered there and eventually broken up. The Cheng family tried to work with the new Communist government and Mrs Cheng remained behind in Shanghai with the company's staff. George re-registered Ping An with Wallem & Co. in Hong Kong before becoming one of the first shipowners to be persuaded to return after proclamation of the People's Republic of China on 1 October 1949. He was fortunate to get back to Hong Kong before the anti-capitalist violence of the 'Three Antis' campaign in 1951. Grandsons George and his brother Peter Cheng (b. 1930) then had to start over again in Hong Kong (q.v. for separate full Ping An S.S. Co. history and list).

In 1930 the Kiouzin (formerly Hsu) yard in Shanghai delivered two fine 1200-dwt passenger-cargo ships for the Shanghai-Haichow trade. At the launch of Yung Ping on 27 December 1929, the owners were given as Ta Hsing Nav. Co. Ltd, which at the launch of Yung An on 15 March 1930 was rendered as Dah Zung S.N. Co. Ltd. Chairman of the company was Lo Pa-hong [see also Ta Tung S.N. Co. Ltd], whose daughter launched Yung An. Nevertheless, the ships would be registered to Ta Chen Nav. Co. Ltd of 1 (later 30) Foochow Road, Shanghai. After Lo's murder by 'terrorists' on 30 December 1937, the company came into the control of the Koo family. Post-1945, after all three ships had been lost during the Sino-Japanese War, the 'shell' company and its wartime claims passed to Koo in-law C.Y. Tung and merged into Chinese Maritime Trust.

Ta Ta (Dah) Steamship Co. Ltd, Nantao 大达輪船公司

Shanghai-Nantong-Yangchow etc.

The business was established in 1904 by Zhang Jian ('a leading gentry entrepreneur') as Da Da Lunchuan Gongsi – 'DD'), part of an industrial complex he had built up at Nantong since the mid-1890s. By mid-1920s the firm dominated shipping routes from Shanghai and Subei (sic) ports, especially to Haimen, Nantong and Yangzhou which became known as 'the little Yangzi routes'. Zhang died in 1926, then in 1927 his brother Zhang Cha fled to Dalian after being denounced as a 'reactionary' by the Guomindang for support of Sun Chuanfang. With 'interference' from the Guomindang, DD and the other Zhang enterprises went into 'a slow but steady decline'. DD also faced increasing competition, and was no longer predominant in its trades. In 1931 it suffered twin shipping disasters [Ta Ta and Ta Chie] and in 1932 the Harbor Board fined DD for overloading passengers. Then after Shanghai Incident, its main bank, Deji Native Bank, collapsed with the loss of $0.2m in shareholder funds. This led to a shareholder revolt and an opportunity for 'godfather' Du Yuehsheng to seize control ('both carefully planned and carefully executed') through economist-lawyer-investor Yang Guanbei by introduction from the Guomindang (prev. Political Dept). Yang arranged for Zifeng Native Bank to acquire Ch$3,000 nominal holding in DD on behalf of himself & Du. Then he allied with disaffected shareholders and used Guomindang connections to demand reform of management, leading to a new Chairman and Managing Director. Green Gang followers seized control of the DD Docks at Shilipu, which were sealed off, thereby halting DD operations. Zhangh Jinkui then joined Du's forces, giving the latter control in 1933: Du as Chairman, Yang as Manger and and Xu Yihe Deputy. Zhang's family through Yang Jian's son Zhang Xiao-ruo was the nominal Managing Director. Yang exercised managerial control with no further AGM's and few board meetings. Other Green Gang members were appointed to key positions and proceeded to enhance DD's business by using Green Gang leverage in Subei from its original power base on the docks and along the Grand Canal in northern Jiangsu. Da Xing Trading Co. was set up with the Shanghai Commercial & Savings Bank and Bank of Communications to act as purchasing agent in Shanghai for Subei merchants. Thus by the late-1930s DD had been transformed into 'a vast trading conglomerate' (shipping, agency and trade credit).

DD also reached accommodation with competing Da Tong ??Renji S.N. Co. (Ta Tung ??), established in 1924 as a partnership between a former salt smuggler and Big Eight mob leader Yang Zaitian and two leading members of the French Concession's Gentry-Councillor clique. However, the duopoly antagonised major Ningpo shipowner Yu Xiaqing who demanded a share of the Subei trade but this was blocked by Du via the Guomindang. Yu's complaints to the Shanghai Bureau of Shipping Administration were unsuccessful but in 1934 Committee for Regulation of Shipping Routes recommended that Du and Yu reach agreement: a DD-Tong Joint Office then hired one of San Peh's steamers for the Subei run. [some details omitted from this summary from Brian Martin, The Shanghai Green Gang (1996: 201-06).]

Du became the founding Chairman of the National Association of Chinese Shipowners, which still exists in Taiwan, and his name and picture are on the Association's website <http://www.nacs.org.tw/02.html>.

Da Da Docks (Dada Matou):

These piers are located on the West Bank of the lower reaches of the Huangpu River. They extend from East Road in the North, South to East Fuxing road, shoreline around 435 m long. Built in 1906 by Zhang Jian. DD operated a route between Shanghai and Nantong, and because there was no ferry Wharf, upon court approval from shop 16 to mark (that is, River Customs) River Bank, built the Lunbu Terminal (the fourth Pier). Later Ning-Shao Shipping Company renovated the first pier and San Peh Shipping Company dock renovated the second and third piers, Ta Hsing company renovated the fifth pier, the Ping An company renovated the sixth pier and Yue Ji Charcoal Line renovated the seventh.

Mostly the DD company developed the business, so the seven terminals are collectively referred to the 'Da Da Terminal'. The piers eventually became public piers. Zhejiang River line passenger ships originally docked there, but after 1949, atrophied due to the cessation of operations of inland passenger transport and domestic water routes. From 1982 it was used as a supplementary terminal for passenger ships and cargo handling and is now part of Shanghai Passenger Service Corporation operations. A reconstruction was completed in 1995 enabling achievement of about one million tons of cargo throughput p.a. [Summary from Baidu Encyclopedia]

Ta Tung Steam Navigation Co. Ltd, Shanghai

The China Yearbook 1934, 1935, 1938 lists as Ta Tung Jen Kee S.S. Co.

Not listed in LR as an owner or in Register entries.

Shanghai-Yangchow

Ta Tung's principal was Loh Pa-hong (1875-1937), who since 1912 had been part-owner and director of the Compagnie Chinoise de Tramways which in August 1913 opened a tramway from the boundary of the French Concession along the Chinese Bund to the Hangchow Railway station and the Arsenal (NCH, 29/3/24, 27/7/13, 28/2/14). His shipping firm Ta Tung .N. Co. Ltd traded from Shanghai to smaller Lower Yangtse ports, including Tsungming Island in the estuary. Essentially it would have been a provisioning trade (grains, livestock, eggs) and local passengers. Lo had many other business interests: in 1922, he became the manager of the Chinese Electric Company, in 1924 took over the Water & Electric Company, in 1925 founded the Wuxhing Iron and Steel Company and in 1928 became general manager of the Nanto Water Company (S.W. Sunquist, A Dictionary of Asian Christianity, 2001). In 1929, he founded Ta Chen Navigation Co. Ltd [q.v.].

Like Nicholas Tsu, Joseph Lo belonged to the Catholic laity in Shanghai and became a leader of the Chinese Catholic community as well as a prominent philanthropist. Already in 1912 he founded St. Joseph's Hospice and in 1913 he was elected foundation president of Catholic Action in China and in 1926 headed the Chinese delegation to the International Eucharist Congress in Chicago. On his way home, he met in Rome with Pope Benedict XV. After founding the Sacred Heart Hospital in 1924 and St Joseph's Hospital in 1926, he went on to establish the Shanghai Mercy Hospital for the mentally ill. In February 1936 the Italian Ambassador bestowed on him the insignia of the Commander of the Order of the Crown of Italy in recognition of his work on behalf of the Salesian Order (NCH, 26/2/36). In the same year he was also honoured by Pope Pius XI. The Sino-Japanese War devastated his shipping and other businesses. To protect his safety he moved his residence to the French Concession, from where he continued his charitable works until on 30 December 1937 he was murdered by two disguised assailants as he was leaving his house (NCH, 25/4/38). No arrests were made but suspicion fell on the Japanese. Lo referred to himself as 'a coolie of St Joseph' and in death he was regarded by Chinese Catholics as a martyr.

Nicholas Tsu, et al.

Haichow S.S. Co. Ltd

Shanghai-Haichow

Nicholas Tsu (Zhu Zhiyao, 1863-1955) had a seagoing father and by marriage Jesuit uncles, who helped him to study Applied Sciences in France (P.P. Mariani, Church Militant, 2011: 19-20). After his return to Shanghai, in 1896 he opened an engine works to manufacture small gas engines to power rice mills (US Dept of Commerce, 26/7/19). Then in 1904 he expanded by establishment of the Kiouzin (Qiuxin) works at Nantao on the Upper Section B of the Whangpoo below the Kiangnan dockyard and more or less opposite Ping An. From production of tramway and railway rolling stock, he began turning out launches and other small vessels. The first known completion was the 300-grt Hsin Tai in 1907.

HSIN TAI 300/07 160' 320hp 11k., shipowner unknown. (Shanghai Shipbuilding Century Review).

In 1911 it delivered the 441-grt coaster Pei Ching to Chihli Santung Lines. In November 1913 it delivered Feihung to the Tientsin-Pukow Railway for use as a Nanking-Pukow ferry and in the following year four vessels for service between Ichang and Chungking (including Lichuan for Szechuan Railway Administration, Chinyu for Juicheng Co. and Yuhang). In the course of World War I, the yard was expanded to be able to build four 5,000-ton steamers at the same time with a blast furnace to produce steel plate (USDC, 26/7/19). The expansion was financed by a mortgage with the French passenger/mail line Messageries Maritimes, who also also operated the large shipyard at La Ciotat). On expiry of the mortgage the yard lacked sufficient funds to continue operations, resulting in a partial sale in May 1919 for Tls 500,000 (US$597,500). The Chinese Government agreed to a Franco-Chinese joint venture formally known as Société Franco-Chinoise de Constructions Métallurgiques et Mécaniques, otherwise Kiousin Dock, with a capital of Tls 1.2 million underwritten by Banque de l'Indo-Chine (NCH, 4/10/19). The fact that Tsu was also 'compradore' of Banque de l'Indo-Chine no doubt facilitated the arrangement.

In 1919 the Tsu yard completed the 3159-dwt, 10-knot passenger-cargo steamers Mylie and Gweneth. Hull and engines were constructed by the yard under supervision of Capt. Bayes-Davy (and named after his daughters) while the boilers were imported from the United States. The two ships had been ordered by Ko Dih(De)-sang (Ku Din-tsiang/Ku Ti Sang), formerly Thoresen compradore but now compradore of the Bank of Chosen, but were completed for the Haichow S.S. Co. Ltd in which Nicholas Tsu was also a substantial shareholder. At the time the orders were announced in May 1919, (NCH, 17/5/19) reported that they were intended for the salt trade from the coastal port of Haichow to Shanghai but after work had begun in the spring of 1919 an extra deck was added to give them a deepsea and passenger-carrying capability and also increasing draught from 15' to 25'. After Gweneth had successfully completed speed trials it was announced that the owners intended to build four more steamers for the salt trade from Haichow, but in consequence of the postwar economic downturn that began in early 1920, these orders did not eventuate. Management of Mylie and Gweneth was transferred in January 1922 to Moller & Co. Not long afterwards, in August 1923, Mylie was lost with only one survivor in a typhoon while on voyage from Chinwangtao to Shanghai with coal. The ensuing marine inquiry revealed that the vessel had been overloaded and it may be wondered whether the extra deck had not also impaired the stability.

The Kiousin yard proceeded to build a series of good coastal and river vessels of up to around 1500 grts. In March 1924 it launched the 1000-grt Hong Dah (Hung Tah) for Mr Loh Pa-hong for the Shanghai-Tsungming island trade (NCH, 29/3/24) followed by Lung Dah and in November 1926 by Tze Dah (Tze Ta). In 1930 there followed the fine pair of 1400-grt motorships, Yung Ping and Yung An for Ta Chen Nav. Co. Ltd [q.v.]. In April 1934 came the buoy tender and lighthouse supply vessel Hai Kuang 海江.

Tsu's shipowning revived in 1928 with purchase of the Haichow and then in 1929 Hsuchow and Chungchow, all small ex-Scandinavian cargo steamers, for service between Shanghai and Haichow in North Kiangsu (Jiangsu). Situated close to the border with Shantung (Shandong) and between the old and new mouths of the yellow River, Haichow had a fertile agricultural hinterland and, not being a treaty port, was reserved for Chinese-flag shipping. In 1933 the new and deeper port of of Laoyao or Lienyunchiang (Lianyungang) was opened nearby together with extension of the Lunghai Railway, which gave access as far inland as Sian and also served the Chunghsing Coal Co. Tsu's new steamers ran as the China United Navigation Co. Ltd with local agents Messrs L. Everett, Inc., who were also Shanghai agents for American Pioneer Line. Competing lines were Chunghsing, China merchants and Shanghai Steamship. CUNC operated until the Sino-Japanese war.

Nicholas Zhu died in 1955 in his nineties. He was a pious Catholic and generous philanthropist. His younger brother Simon Hsu Kai-min (1868-1960) became a Jesuit priest and in 1925 was consecrated Bishop of Haimen (columban.org) while the younger Joseph Hsu Ju-lin (1973-1957) managed the family's business affairs (Mariani, 2011).

According to York Lo's researches on the Industrial History of Hong Kong website ('A Century of Riding the Waves'), Charles Eddie Hsu (Hsu Ting-Zuo, 許廷佐) was born at Tinghai in 1882 but migrated to Shanghai with his mother after the death of his father, a fisherman, when he was only six years old. At the age of 13, he was referred by foreign missionary to work at the Astor House Hotel in Shanghai, eventually becoming the manager of its Grill Room. Located on Broadway (Daming Lu), the city's finest hotel reopened in January 1911 with 211 rooms and a 500-seat dining room. Eddie carefully saved his earnings from tips until in 1916 he was confident to found C. Eddie & Co. (益利號) and under that aegis to open Eddie Café beside the tramway on the corner at 68 Broadway and 'serving both Chinese and foreign food with live music and entertainment'. Advertised as 'the only "high-class" café in Shanghai', it was an immediate success with assured patronage, including from navy personnel.

With revenue from the café, Eddie Hsu then diversified into a ship chandlery, a metal shop, aerated waters. He listed as 'general storekeeper, ship chandler, navy contractor and coal merchant'. There followed an exchange bank and, in the early 1920s, a night club and cabaret. All these establishments did good business with the U.S. Asiatic Fleet. York Lo notes that in January 1927 he formed Eddie Aerated Water Co (益利汽水廠) to manufacture 'a wide range of soda – orangeade, ginger ale, lemonade, sarsaparilla, and cola ('Eddie Kola')' and with Tang Chun-chuen (鄧振銓) opened Chen Lee Bank (振利銀號).

C. Eddie Hsu and C. Eddie & Co. building in early 1920s with Eddie café on the ground floor and prominent neon signage (York Lo, 2019)

Eddie's first venture into shipping came at the beginning of 1922 when he became part of the Chusan S.S. Co. syndicate headed by magnate Chu Pao-san (Zhu Yusan) to invest in the new steamer Chusan (1253/22), delivered by Shanghai Dockyard in June 1922 to run between Shanghai, Haimen and Tinghai. Then in November 1926 Eddie himself became a prime shareholder in Yi Li Steamship Co., which purchased the ex-Russian steamer Okhotsk (1908) and in February 1927 after refit placed her in a weekly Shanghai-Wenchow line carrying passengers, mails and cargo. Wenchow was an outport with a busy Chinese commerce and its shipping was entirely under the Chinese flag. Yi Li (also written Yi-Li and Yili) was immediately the best ship, outclassing China Merchants' Kwang Chi (505/87) and later the larger but older Hae-An (1344/73). In September 1931 Yi Li gained a consort in Hsin Yi Li (663/94), the former South Seas missionary steamer John Williams) running further south to Juian. This seems to have been a different syndicate but Yi Li S.S. are listed as agents from the end of 1933. Meanwhile, by mid-1932 a third vessel had been added in Yi Sung (1833/90), a former sailing ship bought from owners in the Philippines. In this case the owning syndicate was Yi Sung S.S. Co., for which Yili S.S. Co. acted as agents). From mid-1933 she plied between Shanghai and Canton. By the mid-1930s Eddie Hsu was also interested in the small ex-Japanese ferry steamer Ning Hsiang (388/03) and the as yet unidentified wooden-hulled Hsin Yung Chuen 新永川 (439/94).

Flush with success during the 1920s and with confidence from national reunification under the Republican Government, in 1929 Eddie sought to develop an integrated new port and township at the strategic location of Sanmen Bay (Wan) at the southern entrance to the Yangtse and Shanghai. To that end, he mortgaged his ships and other profitable businesses. It was a grand vision but the project was dogged by bad luck. One of his ships was pirated and stripped of valuable cargo en route from Shanghai. In 1931 the Japanese seizure of Manchuria dented confidence. Then in the mid-1930s China was struck by a severe depression brought on by a crisis in the silver-based currency. San Men Bay still needed a lot of investment to become viable. Fellow investors backed out, while at the same time the depression took its toll on the rest of Eddie's business empire. The China Press of 18 August 1936 reported 'an elaborate tea party, held the previous Sunday by Mr and Mrs Eddie Hsu at their Love Lane residence' to celebrate Mrs Hsu's birthday (which was not at this time of year - the reporter may have misunderstood) with thirty of their friends. Then a month later (14 September) the headline 'Eddie Fold Up Shop: Well-known Waterfront, Cabaret Figure Here for Many Years' reported that six of his businesses had closed, being Eddie's long-established Ship Chandler Shop and Eddie's Aerated Water Company, both at 33 Tientsin Road, and Eddie's Metal Shop and Tseng Li Exchange Bank, both at 170 Broadway. The debts were not disclosed but 200 men were said to have been put out of work from these four businesses, besides which Eddie Glass factory and the San Meng Wan Real Estate Company also closed. His interest in the café/night club/cabaret had already been sold in March 1930 to J.H. Browning to become Browning's Cafe. The Sanmen Bay project was taken over by the Chekiang provincial government (China Press, 4/1/36), but any further development was soon overtaken by outbreak of the Sino-Japanese War, when the Bay became a battle front.

Though not mentioned in the press, the ships were also affected. Hsin Yi Li had already been sold in 1934. Li Sung had been laid up in the Upper Whangpu off Lunghwa in mid-September 1935 and around May 1936 been sold to Chung Hsing Mining Co. and recommissioned for the Pukow-Shanghai coal trade. The reliable Yi Li carried on as usual in the Wenchow line but was repossessed by the Mei Yeh Bank and by early 1936 sold on to the Tien Shing S.S. Co. The status of Hsin Yung Chuen and Ning Hsiang is unknown. Eddie evidently retained some interest in the last three ships and had now began to rebuild his shipping business.

After outbreak of the Sino-Japanese War in July 1937, Yi Li was flagged out along with most of the San Peh fleet to the Chinese-Italian Navigation Co. Ltd as Comandante Paolini 寶利 but continued in her accustomed trade to Wenchow, now routed via Tinghai. Towards the end of 1937, Ning Hsiang transferred to Empresa Portuguesa de Navegacao e Comercio (Portuguese flag) as Lisboa. There is also mention of two other unidentified Portuguese-flag vessels under the beneficial ownership of the Hsu family, Tempo (天寶 Tien Pao, perhaps ex 台山 (Tai Shan) and Faro (perhaps ex 福祿 Fu Lu/Foo Loo). Notwithstanding these foreign flags, the Japanese kept a close eye on the ships' movements as they sought to run the blockade to small Republican ports and bring provisions back to Shanghai, notably fish from the Chusan Islands. It was a dangerous game of cat-and-mouse. According to NCH (3/5/39), on 13 April 1939 Lisboa and Faro were both detained outside Woosung by Japanese forces and forced to hoist the Japanese flag, after which they were laid up near the fish market at Yangtzepoo before in November 1940 reportedly being sold to Japanese interests (NCH, 13/11/40 'River Boats Sold for $500,000': "The sale of five boats flying the Portuguese flag to a Japanese shipping interest will involve a purchase price of CN$500,000, it was learned yesterday. The boats have been under detention by the Japanese naval authorities for a considerable time and tied to buoys mid-stream opposite the fish market in Yangtzepoo. It is understood the official transfer of the vessels to new owners will be made in a few days. The boats concerned include the ss. Faro of the Empreza Portuguesa de Navegacio e Comercio and the ss. Lisboa of the same company". Meanwhile, Hsin Yung Chuen had been recorded as 'sold' in August 1938 to Reuter, Böckelmann & Co. and re-registered at Shanghai under the German flag as Kondor for operation between Shanghai and Yangtze delta ports.

'Shen Bao' (9/5/41) mentions a 新鴻慶 Hsin Hoong Hsing (q.v.) as being managed by Yih Lee S.S. as coming into collision with 龍華丸 Ryuge Maru (457/18, ON 23803). This vessel of 740 tons net had been reported since mid-1936 as running to Ningpo for Dah Hsin S.S. Co.

By the end of the war all these ships had been lost one way or another except for Kondor (ex Hsin Yung Chuen), which in 1942 had been reflagged under the Chinese (collaborationist) flag as Dah Foong, still under management of the Hsu family. Sadly, Eddie Hsu had died of cancer in 1941 at age 59. It was left to his three sons Vung-kwei (1905-2007), Wen-Yung and Wen-Hua (born at Tinghai in January 1923) to rebuild the business in which they had already served rigorous apprenticeships. That is a separate story set out in *W.H.
